

IMO-SINGAPORE
FUTURE OF SHIPPING
CONFERENCE 2021

23rd April 2021
ONLINE WEBINAR

International shipping moves more than 80 per cent of global trade, helping drive socio-economic development the world over. The International Maritime Organization (IMO), its Member States, civil society and the shipping industry have been working together to establish and maintain a global framework of regulations and recommendations to ensure that shipping continues to provide a safe, clean, dependable and efficient form of transportation.

International shipping is also on the cusp of change, driven by new tools made available by digitalisation and by the growing imperative to decarbonise. The IMO-Singapore Future of Shipping conference seeks views from key players on building a coordinated global approach and on tapping new opportunities for safer, cleaner and more efficient shipping.

Participation in this conference is free, we look forward to seeing you there!

Singapore Maritime Week (SMW) is one of the world's leading maritime events and is organised annually and driven by the Maritime and Port Authority of Singapore (MPA). Every year, SMW gathers the international maritime community for a week of flagship conferences, dialogues, exhibitions and social events in celebration of all things maritime. The range of activities and events organised by MPA, industry stakeholders and research and education institutions, as well as the cosmopolitan profile of participants, reflect the vibrancy and diversity of Singapore as a global hub port and leading international maritime centre.
